TELESCOPE FILM ANNOUNCES COLLABORATION WITH GERMAN FILMS
New microsite will promote German film content to American audiences

Seattle, Wash. (February 14, 2020) – Telescope Film, the definitive resource for international film in the US, in collaboration with German Films and KINO! Germany NOW!, is proud to announce the launch of the German Films microsite on telescopefilm.com.

The German Films microsite will showcase the best in German film content, including narrative features, documentaries, animation, shorts, and series. It will also provide access to a database of more than 30,000 German films and co-productions, with information about where to watch them in the USA.

“While telescopefilm.com is a site for all international film, this partnership will bring attention to German content, for which there’s a large audience in the US. We’re excited to partner with German Films and their US-focused initiative KINO! Germany NOW! in order to better serve that audience – and to help it grow,” said Justine Barda, CEO of Telescope Film.

“With this new offer, German Films is expanding the visibility of German films beyond festival and classical cinema screenings; with the experienced service provider Telescope, we have found a competent partner who offers a user-friendly interface to find a comprehensive range of German film content on US streaming platforms and to introduce interested viewers to specially curated selections,” said Simone Baumann, Managing Director of German Films. “With this additional new service, we are addressing and adapting to changing market conditions.”

The German Films microsite, telescopefilm.com/germanfilms, will launch on February 20, 2020.
